

Dear Mr. & Mrs. Seller!

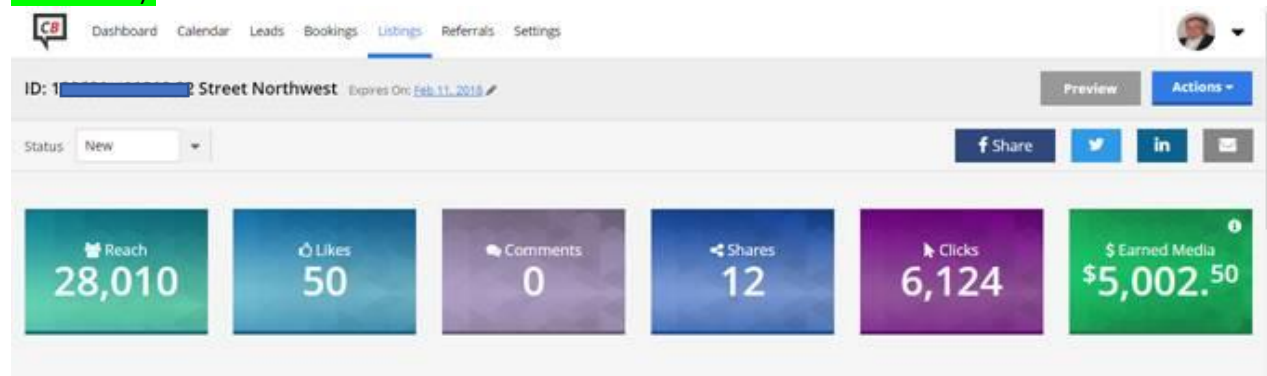

Here is your weekly update with more on the activity generated for your listing. I have solicited the buyer/viewer and realtor comments. Sentiments as follows:

- What did they like about the property? What did they feel they would prefer improved/changed
- Property shows well (or not) with specifics liked / not & why
- Property is priced well (if not – get example comparables leading to the viewer/REALTOR’s price position)
- Interest in next steps / making offer / 2nd viewing / follow up with information requested

While the overall economic landscape of this demographic in the real estate market has been weak/(strong), there are many “Forecasting Experts” who have stated the condo market is expected to increase in activity and values based on changes to mortgage rules & economic factors. My January newsletter here includes the forecasts set out by industry leading sources and the City of Edmonton noting increased prices for condo taxes etc. as well.

Your Latest Activity Stats are Enclosed:

City Blast Cumulative Totals (listing is being re-featured / relisted again today on CB across FB, LI, Twitter & some run off to Instagram – again – gets promoted by a network of Realtors that are part of the CB client base):

MLS TOTALS Have Increased Significantly since the Price Reduction in January

Good Morning!

I hope your weekend was great! Here is the latest on activity Stats for your listing.
Bottom line: it continues to be seen all over the web!

I also included a little more details on the extra advertising below as well based on some discussions with Chris.

Excerpt from latest market report (attachment enclosed) shows buyer's market continues to escalate, more homes for sale, less sales, more inventory on market (same trends in rental markets – hoping you viewed the rentfaster.ca links sent last week or so to review rental inventory, values, condition, locations & incentives being offered) – 1 ray of hope? Our buyer's market is slightly better (for sellers) than 2017's start.

MLS activity continues to rise:
